International Development Studies

Part-Time Position
In
International Development Studies

The International Development Studies Program at Saint Mary’s University is seeking a qualified instructor for the following course for the second semester of the academic year 2016-2017. Please note that these courses are cross-listed at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. This is a part-time position governed by the terms and conditions of the current Collective Agreement between Saint Mary’s University and CUPE Local 3912.

Gendered Dimensions of Development: Perspectives and Approaches
(IDST 4850.2/6850.2, Thursday 11:45-14:15)

This is the IDS Program’s area specialization course in gender analysis, focusing particularly on women’s special role in the development dynamic in developing societies. The course consists of lectures, presentations and discussions for graduate and undergraduate students about the current range of perspectives, explanatory narratives, policies and practice being debated with regard to the many dimensions of women’s participation in the development process. The course will focus on the critical analysis and resulting approaches used to conceptualize and structure our understanding of the role of gender in development, with specific reference to women.

Applicants for this position must have considerable teaching experience in the area of women, gender and international development at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. An earned PhD in a disciplinary area relevant to development with a focus on women and development is preferred; an exceptionally qualified applicant with an MA will receive consideration. Applications must contain a letter of application, an up-to-date CV, and teaching evaluations or other evidence of successful teaching. The completeness of applications is entirely the responsibility of the applicant. The selection committee will begin reviewing applications on June 6th, 2016, and will continue to review applications until the position is filled. Completed applications should be sent by email or regular post to:
