International Development Studies

The International Development Studies Program at Saint Mary’s University is seeking qualified applicants for the following course in the first semester (September-December) for the academic year 2015-2016. Applicants should note that this is a cross-level, undergraduate/graduate course. This is a part-time position governed by the terms and conditions of the current Saint Mary’s Collective Agreement with CUPE Local 3912.

1st Semester

“Southeast Asia: Contemporary Development Issues”
(IDST 4461.1/6661.1)

This is the IDS Program’s principal seminar for studying the salient development issues in Southeast Asia. Depending on the instructor’s regional expertise, emphasis may be placed on Southeast Asia proper or the development challenges posed by the influence of China (and by extension, Chinese development) in the region. The instructor will give lectures and will lead discussions on the major development challenges, local and national assets, and prospects for future development in the region, as well as supervise and evaluate assigned student work.

Applicants for this position must have considerable teaching experience in the area of Southeast Asia and China and its development issues at the undergraduate and graduate levels. A PhD or ABD is preferred; however, an MA will be given serious consideration if the applicant is particularly well-qualified with respect to one or more of the position requirements. All applications must contain a letter of application, an up-to-date CV, and teaching evaluations or other evidence of successful teaching. The completeness of applications is entirely the responsibility of the applicant. The selection committee will review applications until the position is filled. Completed applications should be sent by email or regular post to:
